To The Sisters of Loretto in their Sesquicentennial year

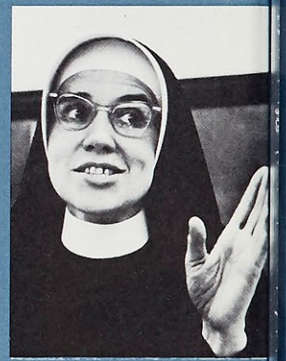

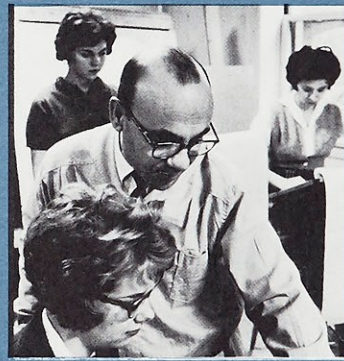

*These years for the future,
like many handprints
on misted windowpanes, were instant by instant made;
from challenged truths —
victories.*

*The crowded wisdom of the before
colours today,
for the morning.*

*Until then, again the same pattern,
with time added and a thought more.*

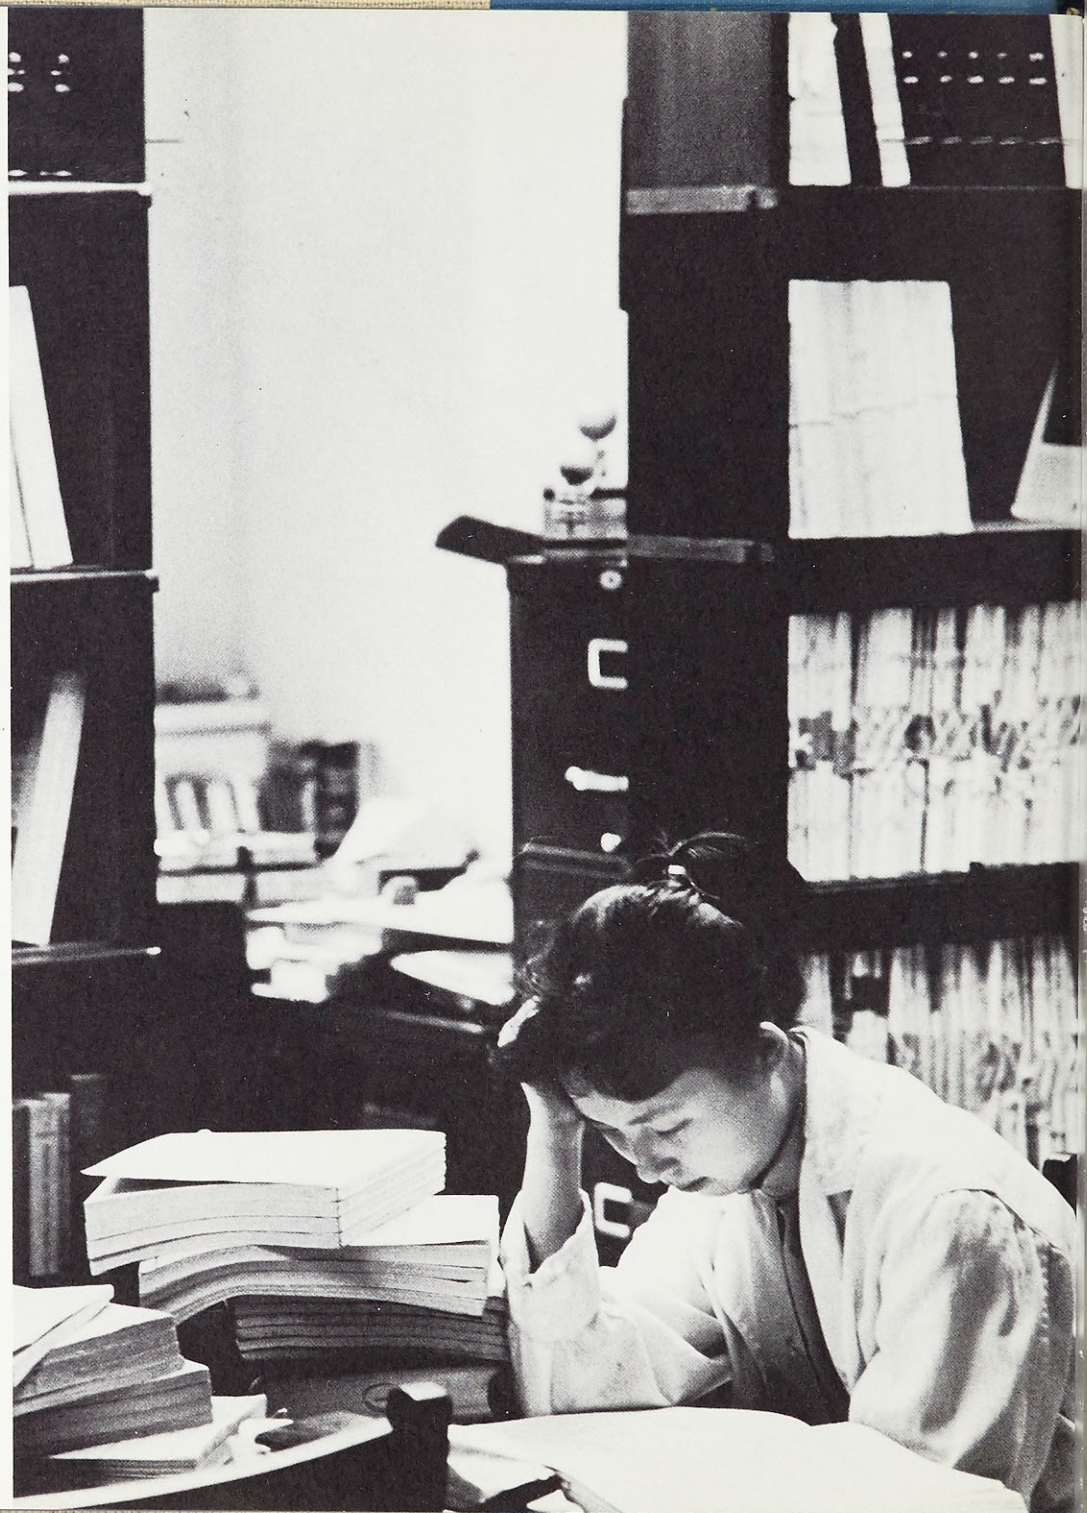

*Remember, there is always the light,
even when the universe stands
transfixed in an eternal question.*

— Shreela Ray

"Our desideratum is . . . the force, the steadiness, the comprehensiveness and the versatility of intellect, the command over our own powers, the instinctive just estimate of things as they pass before us, which sometimes indeed is a natural gift, but commonly is not gained without much effort and the exercise of years.

This is real cultivation of mind."

The LAURETANUM staff of 1962 believes that at Webster College education is a true adventure: a daily confrontation with knowledge, old and new, a courageous search, discovery, and contemplation of truth. This recurrent freshness of approach, we believe, comes from all our teachers, religious and lay, but it stems from the basic pioneering efforts that for a century and a half have marked the Sisters of Loretto, who conduct our college. In this their sesquicentennial year, we gratefully dedicate our book to them.

Our 1962 LAURETANUM is itself a pioneering venture, since it departs from traditional year-book structure. Instead of the usual pattern of class groups as such, we choose to present only the senior section, as we intend the book to be a special tribute to the graduates. Instead of campus organization formals, we offer candid pictures of the Webster students in all aspects of their college life: study, prayer, and play.

Cardinal John Henry Newman, a searcher and finder of the truth, is the spokesman for our study life; Thomas Merton is the guide for our spiritual section; and a layman, Jean Mouroux, is the guide for the remaining pages. Initial texts, however, are our own coinage and conviction: we see all our study as a search for truth; we enjoy sharing our discoveries; and we see our graduation as a stage in our learning life. May our goal of wisdom escort us into the presence of Eternal Wisdom.
